Creating and Sustaining Schools for the Global Age

Anthony Jackson, Executive Director, International Studies Schools Network; Shari Albright, CAO and Texas Regional Facilitator, International Studies Schools Network, and Director of Special Projects, North East Independent School District, San Antonio, TX; Hoa Tu, Principal, Henry Street School for International Studies, New York, New York; and Tom Welch, Senior Consultant, International Center for Leadership in Education

What practical lessons can be learned from educators experienced in developing schools to prepare students for the global age? Leaders from schools in the International Studies Schools Network (ISSN), a national network of internationally focused small urban public schools, will describe their approach to global education with emphasis on lessons that can be used to “globalize” secondary schooling experiences in general. The panel will describe the ISSN school model and support systems used to facilitate the creation and development of ISSN schools. The role of technology in support of language instruction will be highlighted.
